- Determine hair type, texture and degree of porosity.

- Low porosity, soft, glassy hair. We'll thicken them with a thickening cream

Apply cream from mid-length to ends, spreading well

Deciding on the tool for the job

-Part the hair into diagonal partings

-Begin to do a backward twist and move softly one way, then the other

-Bring the iron diagonally from top to bottom with the thumb facing down. Make a full turn at the root and only then pull the iron down 2-3cm

Pull out the iron, holding the tip of the strand with the other hand

Now the thumb is facing up, bring the iron to the place where the curl continues and make a twist on the spot in the other direction to yourself

- Continue alternating the direction of the curl until the end of the strand

- You should get an irregularly shaped, broken curl

- Curl the entire row this way, alternating the direction of the curl

- After all the curls have cooled, comb through them with your hands

Then fix with sugar spray and smoothen the fluffs with a finger

- For a long-lasting, fix, slightly lifting the strands, with aerosol spray with middle fixation

- Part the next diagonal row

Curl, alternating directions

It is important not to change the position of the iron and to heat the hair properly

- From the second row, you can add a teasing to add volume and create a beautifully shaped hairstyle

We'll use the powder for the teasing

- Apply the powder from the bottom of the strand to avoid leaving a white residue on the hair
- Put the comb parallel to the head, 4-5cm from the root and move it downwards until it stops. Repeat this way 2-3 times
- Make a teasing all the strands in the row
- First, we separate the strands with our hands, then we apply sugar spray and more carefully smooth out the fluffs with our fingers, thus making the style more textured
- To make it airy, fix, lifting the strands, with aerosol spray

- If necessary, you can take a fork and clean up the teasing if you can see it
- Part the next diagonal row, curl and comb the strands
 - We have a small frontal-scalp area left, here we determine the parting. All of our hair will be styled backward, so when we curl, lay the strands backward
- Make a horizontal parting and make a curl. Don't forget to do the teasing
- We take apart the hair first with our fingers, then use a sugar spray
- For more hold, we apply a spray, adding more air to the hair

Let's do the hair

- First, we'll select the strands near the face. They should correct the shape of the face a bit
- Next, select a small section of hair on the left side. Split it in half
- Throw the closest to the face strand over the second strand. Form a twist in the direction away from the face

The twist itself should not start from the root itself, but just behind the ear

-Hands relaxed, the soft twist should be very light, not tight

-Form a twist to the end of the strand

- Pull the strands up a bit, making the twist more airy

- Guide the strand to the opposite side, while beautifully laying out the strands near the face

- Secure the strand closed with the bobby pins. Insert the pins along the strand so that they are not visible
- Fix the whole strand like this
- Pull the texture out a little more, making the twist even airier
- Fix with non-aerosol spray for more lasting and cleanliness, smooth out small fluffs

Repeat the same on the other side

- Separate a small strand and form a very soft twist
- Pull up the texture and pull the twist to the opposite side.
This strand should lie close to the previous one.
- Try to get into the drawing so that it is deceptive to see that it is not two twists, but a braid
- Fix it with bobby pins in the closed state. Pull out the texture and fix it with a non-aerosol spray

We'll make two (three) small braids from three strands

- We take the iron, bring it from top to bottom, make a full turn with the iron, warm up the braid a bit, and slowly lead it down
- Let's do all the braids like this
